LORD DERBY'S HOMER.
Published This Day by CHARLES SCRIBNER & CO., No. 124 Grand-st. New-York.
THE ILIAD OF HOMER,
RENDERED INTO ENGLISH BLANK VERSE BY EDWARD LEAR OF FERRY.
From the Fifth London Edition.
Two volumes, crown 12mo., on tinted paper. Price $5.
Extracts from Notices and Reviews from the English Quarterly Journals, &c.

"The merits of Lord Derby's translation may be summed up in one word: It is eminently attractive; it is instinct with life; it may be read with fervent interest; it is immeasurably nearer than Pope to the text of the original. * * * It will not only be read, but read over and again and again."

"Lord Derby has given to England a version far more closely allied to the original, and superior to that that has yet been attempted in the blank verse of our language."—[Edinburgh Review.]

"As often as we return from even the best of them (other than translations) to the translation before us, we find ourselves in a purer atmosphere of taste. We find more spirit, more tact in avoiding either trivial or conceited phrases, and altogether a presence of merit, and an absence of defects which are too often the result of a desire to be original. * * * It is the best I have seen, and I consider it the most judicious choice in the hands of English readers as the truest exponent of the original, the nearest existing approach to a reproduction of the originally matched feature."—[Saturday Review.]

"While the translation of Lord Derby is such as Pope himself would have admired, his third is in my judgment superior to that of the first named. His style is clear and forcible, and his sense is sound. * * * It is the best I have seen, and I consider it the most judicious choice in the hands of English readers as the truest exponent of the original, the nearest existing approach to a reproduction of the originally matched feature."—[Saturday Review.]

"Among these curiosities of literature, which are also its treasures, Lord Derby's translation of Homer must occupy a very conspicuous place. * * * It is on the whole, more remarkable for the constancy of its excellence and the high level which it maintains throughout, than for the special beauties of its style."—[The Reviewer.]

"We have no objection in saying that it is by far the best representation of Homer's Iliad in the English language."—[London Times.]

THE FIRST NUMBER OF THE FORTNIGHTLY REVIEW.

Edited by GEORGE HENRY LEWIS, was published in London May 15, and will arrive in New York about the 20th inst.

This is a new English Journal, similar to the "Particular Review," treating of subjects which interest everybody, and intended for a wide circle of readers, and contains all the interests which are neither too trivial nor too serious for the part of the paper questions, nor too brief for delineation.

The FORTNIGHTLY REVIEW will address the enlightened reader of all classes by its treatment of topics specially adapted to his class, and will be a valuable addition to the library of every man who can give any care to his reading. The first number will be given to the expression of individual opinion may readily acceptible to a very various public.

The object of the FORTNIGHTLY REVIEW is to be come the organ of the advanced expression of mind and taste, and to be a guide to the best in literature, science, and art. Each contribution will have the security of an author's responsibility. Each contributor, in giving his name, will not only give any care to his reading. The first number will be given to the expression of individual opinion may readily acceptible to a very various public.
